SID STEPHENSON AND AARON F DIEBELIUS

BUNYIP

BUNYIP: A mythical creature from Australia's ancient history. It is believed by some that blood and flesh from the BUNYIP can miraculously speed the healing process.

Summary: In a remote cattle station in Australia's Simpson Desert a cattleman kills an unidentified creature that is slaughtering his cattle. Within hours, the story that a BUNYIP has been shot goes viral World-wide. For political reasons the story is given credibility by the Australian Government to divert public attention from a potentially World shattering news announcement.

Powerful political lobbies and criminal forces relentlessly pursue the truth behind the 5000 year old BUNYIP legend. The story challenges and questions the issue of State Sponsored Assassination for the greater good - some possessions are simply too big to be owned by a single person.

Set in the remote isolation of Australia's Simpson Desert, this story questions whether myth can ever be suppressed or destroyed, when in comparison, reality is often tenuous and fragile.

This book is written in a unique genre called SCROVEL. This is an amalgamation of a SCREENPLAY and a NOVEL. It tells the story in what can be seen and heard in SCENES. All introspective text is removed, so the reader experiences the story by playing the 'virtual' movie in their head as they read. If you love movies, then you will love SCROVEL.
